

- Usually, dreams happen in REM stage, but not necessarily all the time (normally 80% of REM happens with dreams, and 20% without)

- REM is also important for memory, consolidation & brain activities, etc...

- There are three kinds of dreaming? ~~Evolutionary~~

1- Evolutionary dreaming - usually happens in kids because they ~~dream~~ dream a lot because 80% of their sleep is REM sleep, while in adults, only one third of their ~~sleeping~~ sleep is with dreams (REM)

- Evolutionary dreams are usually fictional, like flying or riding a dragon, that's why it happens mostly in kids

- This kind is important for memory, elimination of unnecessary information

③ True dreams - Some believe that it's metaphysical, and others believe that it is a function of the brain to anticipate the future, yet involuntarily

- Mechanisms of these three kinds of dreams <sup>are</sup> different. Mechanism of the evolutionary dreaming comes from deep parts of the brain (mammillary <sup>or reptilian</sup> ~~part~~ part of our brain). (we have three types of our brain at the same time: Reptilian, mammillary, and human brain). The developed cortex inhibits <sup>the other types</sup> ~~the other parts~~ of brain, for that reason, the ~~adults~~ adults have less evolutionary dreams ~~than~~

(REM)

- At the same time, while dreaming, there is another system <sup>inhibiting</sup> ~~inhibits~~ the lower parts of the brain stem and the body. While dreaming, we can not move
