Algorithmic and Register-Transfer Level Synthesis: The System Architect's Workbench Donald E. Thomas, Elizabeth D. Lagnese, Robert A. Walker, Jayanth V. Rajan, Robert L. Blackburn, John A. Nestor, 2012-12-06 Recently there has been increased interest in the development of computer aided design programs to support the system level designer of integrated circuits more actively Such design tools hold the promise of raising the level of abstraction at which an integrated circuit is designed thus releasing the current designers from many of the details of logic and circuit level design The promise further suggests that a whole new group of designers in neighboring engineering and science disciplines with far less understanding of integrated circuit design will also be able to increase their productivity and the functionality of the systems they design This promise has been made repeatedly as each new higher level of computer aided design tool is introduced and has repeatedly fallen short of fulfillment This book presents the results of research aimed at introducing yet higher levels of design tools that will inch the integrated circuit design community closer to the fulfillment of that promise

1 SYNTHESIS OF INTEGRATED CIRCUITS In the integrated circuit design process a behavior that meets certain specifications is conceived for a system the behavior is used to produce a design in terms of a set of structural logic elements and these logic elements are mapped onto physical units The design process is impacted by a set of constraints as well as technological information i e the logic elements and physical units used for the design

Beyond the Architect's Eye Mary N. Woods, 2013-12-11 Typical architectural photography freezes buildings in an ideal moment and rarely captures what photographer Berenice Abbott called the medium's power to depict how the past jostled the present In Beyond the Architect's Eye Mary N Woods expands on this range of images through a rich analysis that commingles art amateur and documentary photography genres usually not considered architectural but that often take the built environment as their subject Woods explores how photographers used their built environment to capture the disparate American landscapes prior to World War II when urban and rural areas grew further apart in the face of skyscrapers massive industrialization and profound cultural shifts Central to this study is the work of Alfred Stieglitz Frances Benjamin Johnston and Marion Post Wolcott but Woods weaves a wider narrative that also includes Alice Austen Gertrude K sebiar Berenice Abbott Margaret Bourke White Helen Levitt Lisette Model Louise Dahl Wolfe Morgan and Marvin Smith Eudora Welty Samuel Gottscho Walker Evans Max Waldman and others In such disparate places as New York City the rural South and the burgeoning metropolis of Miami these unconventional architectural photographers observed buildings as deeply connected to their context Whereas Stieglitz captured New York as the quintessential modern urban landscape in the period the South was its opposite a land supposedly frozen in the past Yet just as this myth of the Old South crystallized in photographs like Johnston s a New South shaped by popular culture and modern industry arose Miami embodied both of these visions In Wolcott s work agricultural fields where stoop labor persisted were juxtaposed with Art Deco hotels a popular modernism of the machine age that remade Miami Beach into a miniaturized Manhattan on the beach Beyond the Architect s Eye is a groundbreaking study that melds histories of American art cities and architecture with visual studies of landscape photography and cultural geography
